Biographical Note

James Brown was a lawyer, United States senator from Louisiana, United States minister to France, and brother-in-law of Henry Clay. He was born near Staunton, Virginia, on September 11, 1766. After attending Washington College (now known as Washington and Lee University) in Lexington, Virginia, and William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Virginia, he was admitted to the bar and began a law practice in Frankfort, Kentucky. He moved to New Orleans in 1804 and served as secretary and then United States district attorney for the Territory of Orleans. In 1812 he was elected to represent the state of Louisiana as a United States senator. He lost his initial bid for reelection in 1817 but was reelected in 1819 and served until 1823, when he resigned following his appointment as United States minister to France. He served in that capacity until 1829. When he returned to the United States he settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he died on April 7, 1835.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of James Brown (1766-1835) span the years 1765-1867, with the bulk of the material dating from 1800 to 1810. The papers are in English and Spanish and contain correspondence and legal and commercial records pertaining to Brown's Louisiana law practice and his service as United States senator. The papers primarily concern legal practices and social conditions in Louisiana. Included are records relating to the court-martial of army officer Thomas Butler in 1804-1805. Correspondents include James's brother, Senator John Brown, and a second brother, Samuel.
