Biographical Note

Journalist, dramatist, magazine editor, U.S. representative from Connecticut, and U.S. ambassador to Italy. Born Ann Clare Boothe; married George Tuttle Brokaw, 1923; divorced, 1929; married Henry Robinson Luce, 1935.

Scope and Content Note

The collection includes photographs relating to Luce's varied careers and her personal life. Many document official activities and travels she undertook during her service as U.S. Ambassador to Italy (1953-1956); others document Luce's careers as a photojournalist, congresswoman, actress and playwright; some also show her involvement in Republican party politics. Aspects of Luce's personal life are revealed in images depicting her family; prominent friends and acquaintances; family vacations; portraits of Luce as a child and young adult. The collection also includes some portraits of Henry Luce's family; photographs of the Luce's art collection; posters advertising Luce's plays The Women, Margin for Error, and Kiss the Boys Goodbye.

Organization of the Collection

Photographs are organized into three groups with the call number designation "LOT," (LOT 11236, LOT 13260, and LOT 13261). Posters are assigned to the following filing series: POS-SPAIN and POS-TH. One panoramic photograph is filed in the PAN FOR GEOG filing series. Each format is cataloged separately in the Library's online catalog and linked through the collection title: "Visual materials from the papers of Clare Boothe Luce."
